CELLULITE BUSTER

What is it? Luminologie Detoxifying Vacuum Therapy
How does it work? During a session of Luminologie, single and double suction caps are deeply massaged across problem areas, sucking the skin upwards into the cup through a partial vacuum to break down cellulite. Rollers are then run up and down the area to smooth out the loosened fatty deposits.
What are the benefits? As well as helping to combat "orange peel" skin, Luminologie stimulates circulation, helps fight fluid retention and, after a course of 15 or more treatments, promises to take centimetres off your problem areas.

What to expect: This is more than a deep massage – it can get uncomfortable at times – but some people do find the suction action relaxing. Wear a G-string to your session.

Cost: A 30-minute treatment at Karpati Hair & Beauté, Sydney, costs $59.95. Call 1300 781 361 for more information.

The verdict: "When I left the salon my skin felt tighter and my body seemed lighter. I also looked more toned, which was a bonus." Debbie Selikman, FAMOUS beauty editor.

INSTANT HAIR REPAIR

What is it? Nanokeratin Permanent Hair Repair

How does it work? It infuses tiny molecules of keratin – the protein that strengthens your hair – into the hair shaft by an electronically produced mist. Once inside the shaft, the keratin expands to strengthen your locks.

What are the benefits?

After three treatments you're guaranteed a 100 per cent improvement in your hair's texture and appearance. The results can last for months.

What to expect: After washing your hair with a deep-cleansing shampoo, your stylist will brush the nanokeratin oil through your locks using an electric mist-producing brush. Your hair will then be ironed to expand the keratin inside the hair follicle, before a sealing solution is brushed through to flatten the cuticle.

Cost: Three applications at Mahogany Hairdressing in Potts Point, Sydney, cost $260. Call (02) 9331 0111 for more information.

The verdict: "My hair has never felt better!" Eva-Maria Bobbert, beauty writer.
